

Ceasars Nightclub

CEASARS
ENTERTAINMENT VENUE

Our local West Midlands reviewers went to visit Coventry club Ceasars and check out what's on offer...

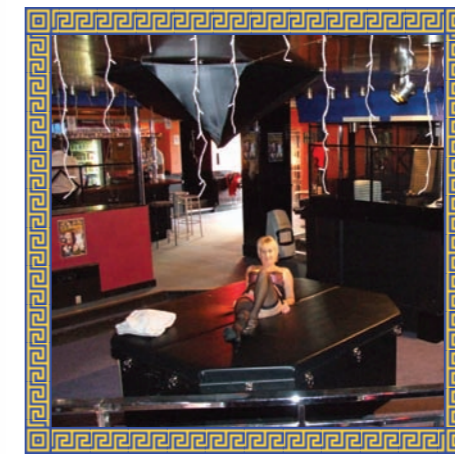

Having visited the same Midlands swinging club for a number of years we decided it was time for a change and so we went to Ceasars Nightclub. Ceasars [sic] is located between Birmingham and Coventry, and only a couple of miles from the motorway network, so it's within easy reach of many of the UK's major cities. For anybody thinking of travelling from further afield, there are a couple of hotels or B&Bs just down the road from the club. The management of Ceasars suggest you mention that you're visiting the club when you make your booking.

Before you go...

Before going to any swinging club for the first time, we have found it's well worth checking to see if the club has its own web site. Ceasar's website can be found at www.ceasarsnightclub.com – or you can follow the link from Swinging Heaven's clubs and parties page.

Ceasars hosts fetish, swinging, Greedy Girls, TV and BDSM events. Some of these are arranged by outside organisations and need to be booked in advance with the respective hosts, while others are arranged by the club itself. All forthcoming events are shown on their website, including details of the opening times, dress code, entry fees and any other rules for the night. There is also an online calendar which runs around one month in advance.

For us, and possibly many others, making plans around childcare or work is difficult, so the calendar, although good, could perhaps benefit from working still further in advance. The night we chose to visit Ceasars was a swinging evening (for couples and singles), including a 'Greedy Girls' evening. The latter was something that neither of us had attended before, so were interested to see what went on.

On the night

The opening hours on the Saturday we attended Ceasars were a little disappointing for us, as entrance times to the club were quite restrictive. Visitors had to arrive between 9 and 11pm and leave by 2am. We felt that the short timespan in which to arrive at the club could put off some potential visitors who aren't exactly local. Wanting to make the most of the evening, we arrived shortly after the doors opened, and although the club was fairly empty, it did fill up remarkably quickly – and it remained relatively busy until we left. Being at a new club can be a daunting prospect, and so it made it easier for us to find our bearings to arrive early and to be able to look around before the majority of visitors turned up.

Terms and conditions

As with most swinging clubs, all visitors to Ceasars Nightclub must join as members. This is a simple process of filling in one form, and showing two pieces of identification – however, as they explain on their website, if you want to visit and become a member, you need to apply in advance by phone or email – no membership (ie, admittance) will be considered if you just turn up on spec. Once membership is granted, this permits entry to any of the events hosted at Ceasars Nightclub. Couples and single males have to pay a £20 annual membership fee, and single ladies pay £10 per year. The various events also have an entrance fee which varies depending on your status (couple or single) and also which event you wanted to attend. Some of the entrance fees are reduced if you contact the club or hosts in advance, which we feel is an excellent offer.

Finding the club

We already knew where Ceasars Nightclub is situated, and so we quickly found our way to the carpark. On the main road there is just one discreet sign, and as the website mentions, the club is set back from the road. It really is – several hundred yards back from the road, along a driveway which has seen better days. The location is perfect for those looking for a discreet place to visit.

Once you are in the carpark, there are several floodlights, and large notices warning of CCTV in operation. We didn't see any carpark security staff, but then the club is in a remote rural location. When we spoke to the staff inside the club, they did say that if anybody requested it, they could be escorted safely back to their car at the end of their evening. They even have a battery and jump leads, on the off-chance a guest's car suffered a flat battery!
